A Wonderland Is West Virginia

COMMERCE AND LABOR BUREAU SHOWS STARTLING FIGURES OF STATE'S INDUSTRIES.

The bureau of the census of the United States department of commerce and labor has just issued bulletin No. 57, on the manufacturing industries for the year ending December 31, 1904. The bulletin presents general information in a form convenient for ready reference, and is most interesting.

West Virginia shows up well among the States, both in capital employed, amount and average of wages paid, and in increase in every department in the preceding five years. The State is 21st in capital invested, the amount being $56,820,823, an increase in the past five years from $48,103,138, or nearly double. The average number of employees during the year was 42,758 of which 39,378 were men over 16 years of age; females over 16 years, 2,249; children under 16, 1,131, and 2,892 salaried officials, clerks, etc. The total wages paid were $21,153,042; the miscellaneous expenses, $3,206,716; cost of material used, $51,419,206; value of products, including custom work and repairs, $99,040,076. Establishments to the number of 1,655 reported having 145,001 horse power, 124,212 of which was team power and 6,569 gasoline and gas. That water power is not overlooked is shown by the report that 627 horse power was derived from water wheels and 120 from water motors. The balance was as follows: Electric motor, 1,423; other power, 623.

Steady concentration of industrial establishments is shown by the report and though the number of large enterprises in West Virginia is small in comparison with the smaller ones, the value of products and per capita saving is enormously greater. There were 775 establishments with a capitalization of less than $5,000, employed 1,250 persons and produced $1,815,125 worth of products; 707 establishments with a capital of less than $20,000 employed 3,915 persons and produced $7,319,877; 1,763 establishments with a capital of less than $100,000 employed 10,667 and produced $19,041,049; 621 establishments capitalized at less than $1,000,000, employed 21,487 persons, and produced $45,685,216; and 53 plants capitalized at more than $1,000,000, employed 250 persons, and produced $3,184,980. In other words, 8 per cent of the establishments had $57,000,000 capital, and the 92 per cent had but $27,000,000. The 8 per cent produced $70,000,000 in value of products, and the 92 per cent produced but $28,000,000.

Our Unwritten Laws.

London Cable to New York Times. The Times, in an editorial this morning, referring to President Roosevelt's breach of an unwritten law by quitting United States territory in his term of office, says:

"The fact that the President has been able to violate a well-established tradition without fear of hurting popular susceptibilities or provoking popular opposition may or may not indicate that public opinion in the United States is undergoing a change.

"As to the immutable character of other unwritten laws, so far some of these laws have been regarded as almost sacred and have been observed more faithfully than certain formal provisions of the Constitution. This is the more curious because some of them which have exercised a great influence upon the foreign and the domestic politics of the union had their origin in incidents or declarations which have no possible bearing on the wide questions they have been often invoked to decide.

"It is indeed probable that some of the declarations, such as Jefferson's protest against entangling alliances, were never intended by their authors as general maxims for universal application. Jefferson himself was a zealous advocate of an alliance between England and the United States in 1803 in order to drive the French from Louisiana.

"But the unwritten laws have received the consecration of time, and it is only since the development of the last few years has begun to compel the United States to take its place among the world powers that men have begun to question them. How far the process has gone and how many of them it may have affected are among the interesting problems of the near future."

Scott was shot by Nichols, who then drank carbolic acid and died. Nichols also fired three shots at Mrs. Scott, but she escaped injury. Two months ago Mrs. Scott secured a divorce from Nichols on charge of cruelty. Within three weeks she married Scott. Just at dark Nichols tapped on the front door of Scott's residence. Scott opened the door and was promptly shot down. Nichols fired three shots at his former wife; supposed he had killed her. Despite the envious attacks of jealous enemies and rivals, Cardui still holds supreme position today [as in the past 70 years] for the relief and cure of female diseases. It stops pain, tones up the organs, regulates the functions, and aids in the replacement of a misplaced organ.
